Amendments to the Abstract:

Please replace the abstract at page 23 with the following amended abstract:

Techniques that define a type of endian conversion to be performed on a portion of data stored within a memory system are described. A table entry is written to a memory management table that specifies the location of the portion of data within the memory system and the type of endian conversion to be performed on the portion of data.

20702106.doc